Forecast For East of England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Wednesday 13 Jan 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
A fine morning. Rain arriving from the west later.

Today:
A dry and frosty start to the day with some hazy sunshine in East Anglia but cloudy elsewhere, with patchy light rain moving very slowly eastwards. Remaining largely dry in East Anglia during the afternoon. A cold day. Maximum temperature 3 deg C (37 deg F).

Tonight:
Rain continuing to push eastwards whilst becoming more persistent during the evening. Some heavy spells later in the night. A cold night. Minimum temperature 1 deg C (34 deg F).

Thursday:
Rain, locally heavy in the morning, becoming confined to western parts though perhaps turning to sleet and snow at low levels in the afternoon. Dry and bright in eastern parts. Maximum temperature 4 deg C (39 deg F).

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Cold on Friday, with early morning frost and isolated fog patches. Windy with rain on Saturday, occasionally heavy. Breezy, brightening up on Sunday, with perhaps rain in the morning.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.